JASPAN SCHLESINGER NARENDRAN, LLP

A partner in the Real Estate Practice Group, Bryan McCrossen is an experienced transactional attorney. His practice covers a broad range of commercial real estate matters in the representation of institutional and non-institutional clients, across all commercial property asset classes, with an emphasis on the acquisition, disposition, and financing of mixed-use and multi-family properties, office buildings, industrial facilities, shopping centers, hotels, development sites, and Section 1031 tax deferred exchanges.

How did you get involved in the real estate industry?

After graduating law school from Hofstra University in 2000, I accepted a position at a New York City firm which was focused on transactional real estate matters. After a short time learning how to navigate residential real estate transactions, I began working on larger commercial matters. After practicing in Manhattan for 22 years, I accepted a partnership position at Jaspán Schlesinger Narendran, LLP, continuing my real estate practice.

What's the best thing about working in Long Island real estate?

The people. I have met some fantastic people while working on Long Island transactions. In general, the courtesy and professionalism of all parties has been second to none (including opposing counsel).

What's your favorite area of Long Island?

I have lived in Long Island my entire life and have experienced much that the Island has to offer, from surfing in Long Beach to fishing in Montauk and everything in between. Like most people from Long Island, I do enjoy the Hamptons, and try to spend as much time there as possible.
